Eugene is a public health doctor and serves in key leadership roles in healthcare management. Eugene has had a distinguished career with the National Healthcare Group (NHG), which serves 1.5 million residents living in Central and North Singapore. Over his tenure, he has led the Group's development of population health, integrated care models, clinical governance, hospital operations, translational research, and healthcare innovation.

In his current role as Deputy Group CEO, he oversees NHG Population Health Campus, comprising its population health office, primary care services, community care services and clinical shared services for the group. Eugene had served 9 years till March 2024, as the CEO of Tan Tock Seng Hospital (TTSH), NHG's flagship hospital comprising 2,300 beds. As CEO, he drove the planning and development of the 17 ha HealthCity Novena Master Plan, which included the development of the National Centre for Infectious Diseases and TTSH Integrated Care hub for rehabilitation and recovery.

To change healthcare, Eugene inspired the set up of the Centre for Healthcare Innovation (CHI) and today, serves as its Executive Director. CHI is Singapore's largest purpose-built healthcare innovation centre, bringing together 88 innovation partners to date from across local and international health systems, academia, industries, and government agencies to co-learn and co-create value. CHI drives innovation for system change; with its Academies focused on Healthcare Value, Health & Social Change, and Healthcare Sustainability. In 2023, Eugene brought together 12 hospitals accounting for more than 80% of hospital beds in Singapore to form the Hospitals of Singapore Network, hosted by CHI and the network is a full member of the International Hospital Federation.

Quote: "Thank you for the opportunity to learn with thought leaders and industry partners in contributing to Workplace Safety & Health. If we take care of our workforce, they will take care of the business. Through the Council's leadership and collaborative efforts, we can build the health of our organisations upon the health and safety of each and every member of our workforce. The workplace can provide for the best environment for our workforce to be healthy with safety always in mind."
